

Nation, President Pay Tribute To Shepard

WASHINGTON (AP)—A proud, grateful nation paid its fullest homage Monday to the first American to breach the barriers of space.

President Kennedy lauded astronaut Alan B. Shepard Jr. and pinned a medal on the man who ventured 115 miles into the heavens last Friday on a giant stride across the space frontier.

Congress praised Shepard with personal greetings and a formal resolution.

And from perhaps 250,000 ordinary folk jammed along the curbs, a warm, roaring, continuous salute rolled with the astronaut along historic Pennsylvania Avenue as he drove to the Capitol.

Humbly and modestly Shepard accepted the accolades. And almost from the first to the last moment of a day of glory he insisted on sharing every honor with the six fellow astronauts who were left behind during his flight and with the hundreds of scientists and artisans who put years of sweat and worry and brain power into the man-in-space program.

At his first full-fledged news conference since his exploit, Shepard put all the emphasis not on what he did but on what "we" did.

There was emphasis, too, not only on the flight into space but on the challenges and tasks ahead of a nation still lagging behind the Soviet Union in some areas in space.

Shepard voiced pleasure and encouragement at the results of his journey into space and added: "We plan to press ahead with the best possible speed."

Yes, he said, he felt some apprehension ahead of time because there was always the possibility of partial success or even failure. He took a long look at the missile which hurled him aloft, he confessed, because he thought it might be the last time he would see it.

"No Bad Moments" But on the flight itself: "I don't think we had any bad moments at all."

The five minutes of weightlessness he experienced was "quite a pleasant sensation," he said. He added there is "no difficulty in maneuvering ourselves, in controlling ourselves... and it has given us no difficulty at all."

What were his feelings at the moment the rocket ignited? Shepard said there were so many technical things on his mind he didn't really assess his feelings. But he said he was surprised that the ignition and lift-off were as smooth as they were. He said he had expected more noise and vibration.

As for the Soviet flight that sent Maj. Yuri Gagarin into an orbit around the earth, the Navy commander, now 37, said he preferred to make no comparisons.

An error in a transcription of the news conference caused some hours of confusion over whether Shepard said this nation could have achieved orbital flight before the Russians.

A reporter asked if the United States could have launched a sub-orbital flight — such as the one Shepard made — before Gagarin orbited the earth.

The astronaut heard the question correctly and said that this could have been done but those in control of the Mercury programs preferred to take no shortcuts which might have entailed unnecessary risks.

However, the transcript showed the question with the phrase "orbital flight." Thus it appeared that Shepard had said the Redstone rocket has orbital capabilities.

Officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration assumed that Shepard had misunderstood the question and issued an explanation to that effect, making clear that orbital flight is beyond the Redstone's capabilities.

Still later, the transcription was corrected to show that the original question dealt with sub-orbital flight and was correctly answered in the first place.

There were times, Shepard said, when the man in space program could have been rushed, but the decisions were against that because the program was an orderly one. "We felt that we had a well-laid out, well-designed, reliable program."

Throughout the day there was an undertone of sentiment that now America mustn't stop to pat itself on the back for the achievements of Shepard and the team that put a man in space. There was the feeling that the nation still has long and far to go, that redoubled efforts, as Kennedy has put it, still are necessary.

So there was a ban on pomp and splendor, on flags and bunting and bands and a carnival atmosphere of celebration.

Yet it was a day of great moments, and of moments of levity and poignancy and tenderness. It was shared by nearly every high official in government—Cabinet members, space agency officials, the White House staff, and the family that lives in the White House, from the President and Mrs. Kennedy to perky little Caroline Kennedy, 3.

Clad in a gay red coat and blue jeans, Caroline looked down from a balcony on all the goings on in her backyard, caught sight of her mother, and shrieked a joyful greeting: "Hi, mommy!"

There was a tender moment when Shepard and his fellow astronauts flew into nearby Andrews Air Force Base by jet from Grand Bahama Island off the Florida Coast. His family was waiting to see him for the first time since the epochal flight, and there was a kiss for his mother and for his pretty, completely charming wife, Louise.

He took Louise's hand and held it while they walked over to a battery of microphones, to the accompanying whoops and applause of probably a thousand onlookers.

Uniform for the day was civilian clothes. And Shepard's was an olive-colored suit with a neat check, a white shirt and olive tie, a single black and white figure with a single black and white figure.

In a matter of moments, all the astronauts and the Shepards were on their way to the south lawn of the White House, where the Kennedy's were waiting in the hot sun on one of those sultry, muggy Washington days.

There were smiles as wide as the heavens and friendly hand clasps all around. Then the President escorted Shepard to a small platform that had been specially built at the steps leading up to the porch beside his office. The red, white and blue draped over the bare boards was about the only touch of bunting in evidence all day long.

Cabinet members, congressional leaders and other officials were gathered on the porch. The White House staff spread along a covered walkway — some even got vantage points on a roof.

"Ladies and gentlemen," Kennedy said, "I want to express on behalf of us all the great pleasure we have in welcoming Cmdr. Shepard and Mrs. Shepard here today."

"I think they know as citizens of this great country how proud we are of him, what satisfaction we take in his accomplishment."

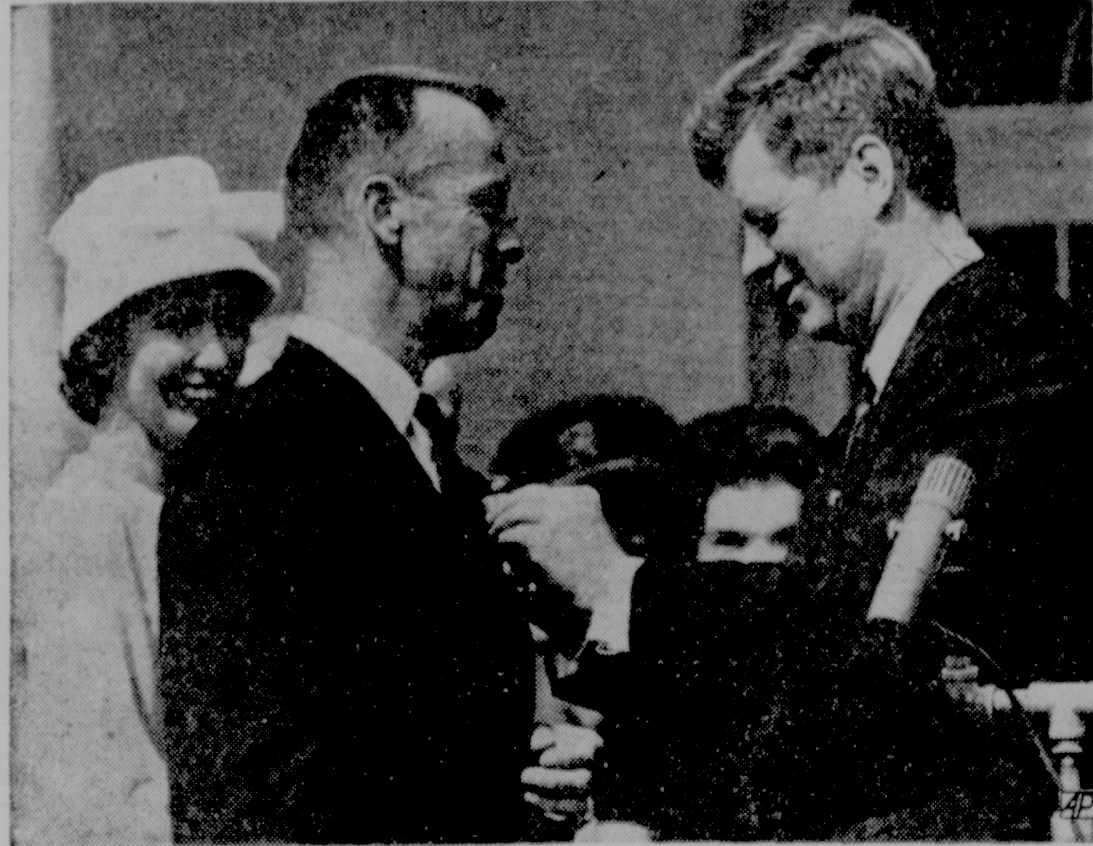

what a service he has rendered our country. And we are also very proud of Mrs. Shepard."

Then, more as Shepard had done earlier at the airport and would do many times during the day, Kennedy gave a deep verbal bow to the other members of the astronaut team and said they knew "that our pride in them is equal."

"Others Employees" "They are the trained and healthy ones," Kennedy quipped. "The others are Washington employees."

Also like Shepard, Kennedy bore down on the fact that "this flight was made out in the open, with all the possibilities of failure which would have been damaging to our country's prestige."

"Because great risks were taken in that regard," the President said, "it seems to me that we have right to claim that this open society of ours which risked much gained much."

Perfect Specimen Of Hero Up In Space Or Down On Earth, 'Shep' Calmest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Up in outer space or down on solid earth, Alan B. Shepard Jr. is a cool customer.

The first American to look down on his country from outer space had his chance Monday to look in on President Kennedy, Congress, a mammoth, cheering crowd, and a mammoth news conference.

He turned out to be the calmest man in town.

Not only that, he managed also to strike just the right note.

Shepard was modest, constantly calling attention to those who had made the flight possible. He was forthright. And he had an easy grin that was hard to resist.

Curiously, the day's goofs — and there were quite a few of them — were all made by someone else.

Kennedy Dropped Medal Take the opening scene of this hero's welcome, in the rose garden of the White House.

First Kennedy dropped the special medal he was about to present to the astronaut. Then he just handed it to Shepard and Mrs. Kennedy had to remind her husband that on such occasions the President actually pins the thing on the hero himself.

"Let me pin it on," Kennedy said. "I'll do my duty."

And he did. But you kind of got the idea, pleasant as it all was, that it was just as well the scientists and not the politicians were in charge last Friday, or we might still be tumbling around Cape Canaveral.

Well, then came the parade that wasn't officially a parade but was a rouser just the same.

In this capital enthusiasm for parades often is whipped up methodically. Bands are ordered out. Marching squadrons are called on. Flags are run up.

There was none of this Monday, by order of Shepard's bosses.

And in one way it was too bad. Why is it those splendid military bands can show up to open the season for the Washington baseball team, which invariably goes down, and then aren't available for a man who has proved he can go far up?

But in another way it was nice that everything was left so simple.

From the moment the modest motorcade left the White House until it reached the Capitol, there was continuous applause, well over a mile of it, applause that usually is drowned out by the marching bands.

Police guessed 250,000 were present, and you would have thought Shepard had greeted enormous crowds all his life. A friendly wave with his right hand to those on his right, a nice wave with his left to those on the other side.

Monday's action, said Shepard, was designed to get the commission "off dead center" in its activities. He noted that the approval of the Liberty Bell license was challenged in the State Supreme Court. A hearing has been set for May 22.

Good Morning! No that looks not before finds himself behind.

NATO Backs Rusk Warning To 'K'

OSLO, Norway (AP)— America's Allies promptly rallied Monday night behind a warning from Secretary of State Dean Rusk to Soviet Premier Khrushchev.

The display of NATO toughness was inspired by the Soviet premier himself. Khrushchev late last month sent word westward through German Ambassador Hans Kroll that he has not abandoned demands to internationalize Allied-occupied Berlin.

And on this 16th anniversary of V-E Day, he told East German Communist leaders publicly he is sure this goal will be fulfilled soon.

The demonstration of solidarity came after Rusk, appearing in the 15-nation NATO Council for the first time, pledged to preserve Allied war-won rights in West Berlin and its approaches.

Inspired By Khrushchev The display of NATO toughness was inspired by the Soviet premier himself. Khrushchev late last month sent word westward through German Ambassador Hans Kroll that he has not abandoned demands to internationalize Allied-occupied Berlin.

And on this 16th anniversary of V-E Day, he told East German Communist leaders publicly he is sure this goal will be fulfilled soon.

The demonstration of solidarity came after Rusk, appearing in the 15-nation NATO Council for of the West, Rusk Monday night conferred privately with the foreign ministers of Britain, France and West Germany on the Berlin and German problems. They were getting together on terms of a West German note to Moscow broadly rejecting the Khrushchev plan.

A review of world affairs, with emphasis on East-West relations, occupied all of this opening day of the NATO Council's three-day strategy session in Norway's Storting (Parliament) Building.

The conference headquarters in downtown Oslo became a magnet for demonstrators for and against NATO. Skirmishing flared during one mass rally.

Far From Agreement Aside from their show of unity over Berlin, the statements seemed far from agreed in their approach to other world trouble points.

Several ministers took a gloomy view of the international scene. They were chiefly men whose countries have been jolted by the rise of Red-aided nationalism in their colonies.

Franco Miquera of Portugal branded the United Nations as being "of not much use," remembering possibly the world body's indictment of Lisbon's policy in revolt — torn Angola, Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium asserted the Congo tragedy might have been avoided if NATO had worked better together.

But the unhappiest of all the ministers was Evangelos Averoff of Greece who saw 1961 as "the most dangerous year since the war."

Averoff summarily added: "The Western powers are under an illusion if they think they can do business as usual with communism. 'The West today stands in danger of suffering the same fate as the Roman Empire.'"

The Greek diplomat then went on to propose a summit-level meeting of the NATO powers this year.

But those forbodings were not shared by colleagues who sought at once to dispel the mood of depression.

Rusk himself injected a cheer-note with an announcement that the United States hopes to have a manned satellite in orbit by the end of 1961. He spoke also encouragingly of coming American space probes to Mars, Venus, and the Moon.

ARKANSAS FLASH FLOOD WRECKAGE—Two autos are left among the wreckage in an alley at rear of the Main business district of Harrison, Ark., after it was swept by a flash flood. Two persons were drowned and an estimated 80 per cent of the business district was heavily damaged. School Subsidies Bill Increased $7-8 Million

HARRISBURG (AP) — House Republicans Monday night led a successful drive to amend the big general appropriations bill to provide an estimated $7 to $8 million in additional state subsidies for school districts.

The 120-61 vote crossed party lines. The changes in the $899 million appropriations measure were proposed by Rep. Ray C. Goodrich, R-Pottsville.

Philadelphia Democrats took the floor to oppose the changes after Chairman J. Dean Polen, D-Washington, of the Appropriations Committee warned that new taxes would be needed to foot the expense of the added subsidies.

The amendments are designed to protect school districts from losing any state aid as a result of increased real estate market valuation.

Districts with increasing market values per pupil receive proportionately decreased state aid. All but some 300 of the state's 2,200 school districts face a loss next year of some state aid because of increased valuations.

Earlier, members voted 68-107 to defeat a motion by Polen to have the amendments labeled unconstitutional. He contended the courts and the Justice Department have held in the past that the general appropriations bill can contain only spending proposals. He said the amendments should be offered as separate legislation.

Philadelphia's 37-member democratic delegation voted solidly against the changes.

Generally backers of the amendments said the board's assessments were out of line and that districts back home were in difficult financial straits and unable to foot increasing school expenses.

May Vote Today House Majority Leader Stephen McCann, D — Greene, said he would call up the measure for a final vote Tuesday.

Other legislative developments: Education — Democrats sponsored a resolution in the Senate proposing appointment of a bipartisan committee to study the report of Gov. Lawrence's committee on education. The resolution was approved and sent to the floor immediately by the Rules Committee. A similar one was beaten by Republicans two weeks ago.

Capital Punishment—Sen. Benjamin R. Donohoe, D-Philadelphia, called a meeting Tuesday of a special legislative committee on capital punishment. He said the committee would decide the scope of its report on hearings concerning proposals to abolish the death penalty in Pennsylvania.

30 Lives Lost Via Tornadoes

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Tornado weather moved into the Ohio Valley Monday after a week of weather violence took 30 lives in twisters and floods.

The spreading of vast backwaters in the Mississippi, Missouri and Ohio River basins drove hundreds from their homes and blocked highways as many sections caught a fifth day of heavy rains.

Building tornadoes fatally injured 17 persons in eastern Oklahoma and one in Arkansas Friday night. Saturday, six drownings occurred in Ohio. Sunday, seven died in Arkansas twisters and floods. Approximately 100 were hurt by violent winds.

Damage was reckoned in the millions in the twister-hit communities of Midway, Whiteville, Clarkridge, Pindall, Summit and Oil Trough, Ark.; at Howe and Reichert, Okla.; at Plano and Stamford, Tex.; and at South Fork, Mo., during the weekend spate.

Flash Flood A flash flood hit Harrison, Ark., where two drowned, Sunday, flushing 14 feet of water through the business section. Clinton, Ill., where a deluge estimated at 6 inches hit early Monday, was also swept by several feet of water which rolled automobiles before it.

A dozen major highways were closed by floods in central and southern Illinois. Hundreds were forced from their homes.

At Browns, Ill., half of the 400 residents were evacuated when Bonpas Creek, a Washburn tributary, turned from a trickle into a muddy torrent.

Thousands of acres of Illinois and Indiana farmland in the Washburn River watershed were covered by murky lakes.

At Marion, Ill., some 70 residents of more than 40 houses were taken to higher ground by state police and volunteer boatmen.

Streams were out of their banks Monday in Ohio, Kentucky, Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Kansas as well as Illinois and Indiana.

Senior U.S. British and French diplomats worked in Oslo, Norway, site of a North Atlantic Treaty Organization meeting, to produce a Laotian peace plan that would set up the kingdom as a united, independent and neutral state.

Foreign ministers of the Western Big Three all plan to be in Geneva Thursday. But they plan to take part in the conference Friday only upon receiving confirmation from the true commission that the cease-fire is being respected.

Radio Peiping announced that representatives of Souvanna and the Pathet Lao arrived by plane in Red China's capital Monday on their way to the Geneva conference.

In Bangkok, Thailand, top authorities of pro-Western Thailand strongly restated their opposition to formation of a coalition government in Laos, its neighbor to the north and east, that would include the Communists.

Wage-Hour Bill On Laundries, Hotels In House WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, D-N.Y., Monday introduced a bill to bring employees of laundries, hotels, motels and restaurants under the wage-hour protection on the fair labor standards act.

These groups were left out of the coverage of the minimum wage bill passed by Congress last week, which raised the minimum wage to $1.25 in two steps by 1963, and increased the number of workers covered.

Powell's bill would affect 140,000 employees of laundries and dry cleaning plants having an annual gross volume of sales of $1 million or more. It also would involve 165,000 employees of hotels and motels and 240,000 restaurant workers.

The bill would include enterprises with gross sales of $1 million or more a year, but individual establishments not grossing $250,000 a year would be exempt from the minimum wage and overtime requirements.

No News Conference WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy will not hold a news conference this week, the White House announced Monday.

Curriculum Guides Help In Training Of Students

(This is the second in a series of two articles explaining the curriculum guides being used by all the schools in the East Stroudsburg Area Joint Schools, developed by school personnel. The guides provide scope and sequence in all the grades, and are considered of inestimable benefit for both teacher and pupil.)

By PAT WILLIAMS

TO point up the curriculum study guides in scope and sequence now in use at the East Stroudsburg Area Joint Schools, observe the growth of a student in all areas.

The "Three R's" have given way to a new concept in teaching: growth of the individual in relation to society. Using the social studies curriculum (which used to be just history) the teacher gives the student social consciousness and responsibility and imbues him with a regard and respect for himself and all people.

One of the goals set forth by the grade level committee is to provide opportunity for children to gain skills, knowledge, understandings, attitudes and appreciations to help them in their maturity.

Beginning in Kindergarten, Pete is taught about his home and the homes of his classmates and about the school they attend. Consideration of family members and the school personnel, Pete begins to find, is part of the responsibility of growing up.

As Pete enters the first grade, the interrelationship of home, school and family is stressed. Making use of audio-visual material, as throughout all grades, the teacher offers art and writing projects to aid Pete in understanding the importance on all kinds of work and its creative happiness and well-being.

He learns that each individual is responsible for the welfare of the group as a whole. The family life of all his classmates is different in relationship from all the others, but Pete is taught to understand the importance of this. Skills are taught in the first grade which include: following directions, developing creativity, sharing materials and ideas, and respect for others.

Music becomes a part of Pete's education in the second grade. He has been introduced to simple music in Kindergarten and the first grade, but now it becomes an integral part of his education. His learning to now has only encompassed home and school. Here, he begins to become aware of the community in which he lives and the relationship of the various members of it.

He learns about the farmers and by celebrating Valentine's Day, he learns of the job a postman does every day. Spelling and letter writing are involved here, and Pete is aware of the learning process. He is learning all the separate studies of reading, writing, geography, music and appreciation of others.

Progressing to the third grade, Pete is exposed to the subject of communications. He learns the ways in which we communicate and learns more of the community and world in which we live.

Telephone office, post office and telegraph office become classrooms for Pete and his third grade companions. Reading, art, music and math all play an increasingly important part in Pete's awareness of society. He compares communications of the past and finds historical correlation to his studies.

He is introduced to Easter, not only in the Christian level, but the ancient pagan customs that were celebrated during that phase of the moon. He learns of the Hebrew holiday, Passover, and its relationship to Christianity. The Easter bunny figures into the story, too.

Pete enters the fourth grade and progresses to absorbing how people live and work in the state. Penn's Woods takes on reality as the class becomes acquainted with the history, geography and early music of the state. He draws pictures and reading is correlated to the subject.

In fifth grade, Pete finds the excitement of discovery and exploration and the dependence on trade and travel. Citizenship develops. The Revolutionary War is studied, and Pete travels west with the covered wagons. History, geography, music, language, arts and science in addition to arithmetic and health are applied to the subject.

Grade six presents an introduction to our southern neighbors. Central and South America are the background of study for Pete. He adds this to the past years of study and finds himself a well-informed member of the Western Hemisphere.

As Pete and his classmates begin the secondary curriculum, it is noted how the social studies curriculum has been the center of learning; all other subjects have been off-shoots of it. In this way, there are no gaps in Pete's knowledge that had been experienced in past modes of education.

Prefacing the secondary curriculum book, Carl Secor, supervising principal of the jointure, notes the need for understanding among the people of the world. Watchword of this guide might be, "To understand is to grow, to live and to let live."

Entering the seventh grade and on to the senior year, the courses of study are so all-encompassing that they must be treated separately although stress is placed on their inter-relationship. The Eastern Hemisphere falls under the examination of the critical eye of the students. History, geography and world culture are bound together by current events of the past and now.

Understanding becomes the key to all the subjects. Facts are important, but understanding of the reasons behind history and the effects on our lives today ranks top in importance.

Pete and his classmates, wearing gowns and mortarboards, are assembled for the graduation exercises. A large class of citizens ready to take up the responsibility of the privilege in being adults. These young people are a product of the education system.

Just as a soufflé depends on proper preparation of the ingredients by the chef, the graduating class depended on the proper application of the guides, by the teachers. But, most important, soufflés don't rise or fall on the chef's attitude; students do react in direct proportion to the teachers involved.

Therefore, the curriculum system is wholly dependant on the teachers and the integral relationship of each to develop the social consciousness and life philosophy that is displayed by Pete and his fellow graduates.

TWO TOBYHANNA Navy men were aboard the carrier USS Lake Champlain during the recovery operation for Cmdr. Alan Shepard, first U. S. astronaut.

Serving aboard the carrier were Melvin C. Hay, electronics technician second class, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Hay, and Harold E. Baker, machinist's mate first class. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hill.

Also participating in the operation was Larry A. Kautz, boilerman third class, son of Mr. and Mrs. David A. Pade of East Stroudsburg RD 2. Kautz served aboard the destroyer USS Decatur.

The Navy recovery force, composed of both surface and air units, was deployed down the flight path from Cape Canaveral and was prepared to recover the spacecraft wherever it landed.

Actual recovery was made by a Marine helicopter which lifted Cmdr. Shepard out of the water in less than five minutes and transported him to the deck of the aircraft carrier USS Lake Champlain, flagship of the down range recovery force.

64 Different Models Of Lighters Made At Ronson's

AS MANY AS 64 different models of cigarette lighters are manufactured in any given day at the Delaware Water Gap plant of Ronson Corporation of Pennsylvania. Plant Manager Gerald Brodsky told the Stroudsburg Kiwanis Club at the Penn - Stroud Hotel.

Every time a new series is introduced, he said, the plant must undergo extensive changes in tooling. The assembly lines are geared to accommodate eight different series at one time, with eight models comprising each series.

Hundreds of operations go into the manufacture of durable lighters such as those made by Ronson. The company, Brodsky explained, is not interested primarily in the sale of lighters at the point of sale, but rather in improving on its reputation for making well-built, dependable lighters that will lead to greater sales in the future.

Full-Time Inspection

To this end, the speaker reported, approximately a large number of the plant workers devote their full time to inspection — first in the receiving department and during each step of the manufacture to the finished product.

Before outlining the many steps that go into the production of lighters, the plant manager reviewed the 65-year "Ronson story" dating back to the company's founding by Louis V. Aronson, grandfather of Louis V. Aronson, II, the present president.

At first, the company made lamps, automobile radiator caps containing thermometers, and voice boxes for mama dolls, the latter an Aronson invention.

In 1910, with the introduction of a flint alloy, the Ronson plant in Newark, N.J., turned to the manufacture of a striker-type cigarette lighter.

The company — then known as Art Metal Works — expanded rapidly after it developed the single-action automatic lighter, and in recent years has added other products to its line.

In 1941, Ronson moved into its Harris St. plant in East Stroudsburg and engaged in defense contracts. Later, its production was scattered among plants on Henry, Spruce and Storm Sts. and Dreher Ave.

The Newark plant was closed in 1954 and its lighter production consolidated with the East Stroudsburg operations, Brodsky said.

The shutdown was due in part to the apathy Newark people showed toward the pilfering of lighters that was taking place inside the plant. Production costs were excessive as a result of the thefts, making further operation of the plant unfeasible.

In 1957, Ronson moved into the new plant it occupies in Delaware Water Gap, consolidating its lighter operations under one roof in a modern one-story building containing 110,000 square feet.

Although Ronson is known as the largest industry in Monroe County and the second largest employer (Tobyhanna Signal Depot, a military installation, is the first), the company strives to fill the part of a good neighbor as well as helping substantially to bolster the local economy.

Edwin Krawitz introduced the speaker.

Lawrence Sees U.S. In Front

HARRISBURG (AP) — Gov. Lawrence said that "America has moved into the forefront in the space age" in one impressive thrust.

Commenting on the successful launching of the United States' first astronaut, Lawrence said in a statement that "there has been no more thrilling demonstration of the American way of doing things."

"Above all, the most significant factor in the entire accomplishment is that this nation had the wisdom to perform this demonstration—from start to finish—in full view of all of the peoples of the world."

Miss Pocono Pageant Set For June 14

THE SEVENTH annual Miss Pocono Mountains Pageant will be staged at the Sherman Theatre, Wednesday, June 14, to select an Official Ambassador to the Poconos to represent the area in the Miss Universe Contest. Finals of this world-wide contest will be held in Miami Beach during July of this year.

The Miss Pocono Mountains contest previously was a preliminary to the Miss America competition. This year the local winner will compete for the title of Miss Pennsylvania and that winner will enter the Miss Universe contest.

Executive Director Mrs. Robert Miller planned to bypass this year's contest. However, many requests from contestants and individuals in the area asking her to continue the project set in motion plans for the Miss Universe entry.

Miss Pocono Mountains must be a girl between the ages of 18 to 25, according to Executive Director, Mrs. Robert A. Miller.

The girl must first of all wish to capture the coveted title in order to vie for same; be a high school graduate prior to the national finals; and possess charm, personality, and beauty of face and figure.

Talent is not a requirement for entry in the 1961 contest, but girls with any special talents such as singing, dancing, dress designing, should make note when making application.

Miss Pocono Mountains will be selected by out-of-town judges. College students, regardless of residence are eligible to apply for entry, as are others who meet the requirements. Entry blanks are available at the Sherman Theatre ticket office or from the executive director.

Contestants must supply own formal wear and swim suit, but the winner of the crown will be given an all-expense trip for chaperone and self to the Miss Pennsylvania finals, in Philadelphia, plus a swim suit and other useful gifts.

Less Optimistic

Commerce Secretary Hodges, among the first in Washington officialdom to herald the end of the business slide, now seems to have switched to the conservative side as an appraiser of the economic scene.

Although various signposts, some of them furnished by his own department, indicate a quickening of the business pulse, Mr. Hodges appears to be somewhat less than optimistic about the speed of the recovery.

The secretary did not give the reason for his lack of enthusiasm, but whatever it is, the facts are that manufacturers' sales and new orders rose in March for the second straight month and were at the highest level since early last fall.

Furthermore, new construction projects in April showed a normal pickup from the previous month, with private home building up sharply.

This heartening news came from Mr. Hodges' department. In addition, the Labor Department reported continued improvement in the job picture; as of April 15 the number of workers receiving unemployment compensation benefits dropped for the eighth consecutive week.

The latest Labor Department's consumer price index also showed that prices were holding fairly stable. Moreover, the demand for steel has broadened and automobile sales last month showed improvement with the weather over March.

The economic picture needs but one item — spirited consumer buying. Mr. Hodges apparently is withholding his enthusiasm until this returns to full force.

Opinions Of Other Editors

Don't Change Signals Too Quickly

Most of the questions asked of Treasury Secretary Dillon by the House Ways and Means Committee on the administration's tax proposals had to do with the recommendation that advantages be withdrawn for certain types of business investments overseas.

That proposition has not been formulated in detail, and there is reason to believe that it may not and probably should not be acted upon at this session of Congress. Some fairly valid general arguments are offered in its favor, but it will have to be very carefully worked out in order to be fair in application.

Only a few years ago the government was urging that American private investment in other countries be increased. Provision was made that earnings on such investments by corporations would not be taxed until brought back to the United States in dividends and then with a credit for foreign income taxes paid.

But then came the reversal of the balance of payments situation, with more dollars and gold going out than coming in. Also it was found that many of the largest investments were not in notably underdeveloped countries but rather in fairly industrialized countries whose wage scale is below that of America.

This sort of investment does not need to be subsidized, but the capital which has been put to useful work abroad on these terms ought not now to be penalized by a sudden change of conditions. President Kennedy's proposal contemplates a two-year phasing out of the present advantages, yet this may not be long enough.

The main thing is that new capital be put on notice that if it is to seek employment abroad it should go where development is most needed. But how to distinguish a primitive underdeveloped country from a mature but slightly tired economy may take some study.

—Christian Science Monitor

George Sokolsky Says . . .

It Is Difficult To Know

Recently General David Sarnoff discussed the problem of communicating scientific knowledge. Some comments were made on this subject in these writings and have received an interesting comment from a young scientist, part of which I give you:

"I was very interested in your article on Dave Sarnoff's suggestion for an idea clearing house; I thought of this idea several years ago but dismissed it as being too expensive. Nevertheless, the entire scientific community needs such a system imperatively.

"If competent, highly trained brainpower is the nation's most valuable and rarest resource, it is surely a waste to have it spend its time thumbing through indexes in libraries. With the ever increasing flood of literature, a scientist can spend more time doing paper research than the lab research he's paid for.

"If, while looking through his microscope, he sees a green spot in a cell, he ought to be able to dial 'green spot' into a computer and be supplied within a minute with a bibliography covering everything that has ever been written on the subject of green spots. Then he will have time to do his work.

"The problem, however, doesn't end here. At the present, the only way a new fact or theory can be given circulation is through the professional journals. At one time when little work was being done in the sciences, the journals were adequate for the task.

"Today, however, with tens of thousands of laboratories cranking out endless rivers of data, the trade papers can't possibly do their job. Some of the better ones are publishing material submitted as far back as three years with the backlog growing each month.

"Even more appalling, important contributions are being published in little known periodicals which no one reads simply because the line is too long at the bigger journals. These important works often pass completely without notice only to be rediscovered much later by duplicated effort which could have been avoided by such an institution as Sarnoff's clearing house.

"The worst problem, though, is the politics of getting published. Many scientists rush into print to save their university positions. Others wear publications like a general wears his ribbons, and crowd the journals at the expense of better work by newcomers.

"On the other hand, many young men will fight to get published just to get a better initial job, even if their theses aren't of sufficient scope to interest an entire profession. These and other abuses pervade many periodicals from their proper purposes thus making them even less efficient means of transmitting scientific advancements . . .

Young men come straight to the point because they have nothing to lose but their youth. Excellent thinking is done by young scholars, even in the social sciences. This material is likely to be in the scholarly journals which have very small circulations and are often passed over unnoticed for years, until some popularizer brings them to the fore in a newspaper or magazine article.

One of the misfortunes of the professional writer is that he is often too verbose to be interesting, too bogged down in the jargon of his discipline, as he calls his profession, to be readable. He writes for a handful of colleagues who will praise him and for a faculty which will vote him a full professorship. But his impact upon his community and his time is nil.

I do not read many scientific journals because some of those subjects are closed to me, but I do read many learned journals in fields with which I am familiar and take ideas from them, but often quote from them, but I must admit that much of it is hard to pin down.

The academician is fearful lest he be suspected of being a layman; therefore he writes in a style which will make him sound like a translation from the German. That was not true of an earlier generation of learned men, such as Charles A. Beard, James Harvey Robinson, John R. Commons, or even Woodrow Wilson who, having something to say, said it.

And they used fewer footnotes to sustain them. So often an article in a learned journal is encumbered with footnotes to prove that the writer really has no original ideas — that everything was taken from someone else.

This is not done to establish modesty; it is rather a crutch to sustain the thinker and to prove that someone else once thought the same way, proving ipso facto that great minds travel on the same road.

The Pennsylvania Story

Panic Stricken

By Mason Denison
(Second Of A Series Of Three)

Harrisburg — The manner in which Pennsylvania's politically loaded Department of Labor and Industry hit the "panic" button in suddenly deciding to enforce provisions of the State's Fire and Panic Act insofar as the Keystone State's schools are concerned is typical of its hair-brained modus operandi.

The ruckus started following a tragic and disastrous school fire in Chicago back in the fall of 1938 when 92 school children and three nuns perished — they couldn't get out of the burning school.

It was at this point that "the great crusade" — with proper fanfare and publicity — was launched by the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry "to make Pennsylvania's public schools safe and avoid a repetition of the Chicago tragedy."

The goal unquestionably was and is commendable — but that isn't quite the point. The question occurred at the time and it recurs with some savagery now in the current school fire hazard elimination fiasco in which the department is currently embroiled.

Why did the department have to wait until after the horse had been stolen to close the barn door? Or, more bluntly put: Why did the department have to wait until an incident such as the Chicago fire (and it could just as well have been a Pennsylvania school instead of a Chicago school) to initiate its school fire hazard elimination program?

The point is: the department had not been doing its job previously over the years of routinely making sure Pennsylvania's public schools were up to snuff on the fire hazard elimination front.

This became obvious — and should be painfully so now — when the department in its "crusade" suddenly decided to check all schools at once to make certain they were in compliance!

The upshot now is history. Some 2000 schools suddenly found themselves cited for fire hazard eliminations — which in most instances required unexpectedly heavy and unbudgeted expenditures, so heavy in fact that the 1959 Legislature set up a near $4 million dollar fund to help out these districts.

On the other hand, had the department over the years ordered these corrections as they developed, the piecemeal corrections could have been made with corresponding piecemeal expenditures, rather than the entire works at one heavy shot!

In other words, prior to the department's sudden "crusade" it had not been doing its job year in and year out as required by law — or there would not have been the tremendous bunch-up that has now developed.

But perhaps more incriminating than anything else aside from the fiscal knot school districts were thrown into by the department's sudden "devout" action, was the danger school children in those bygone years apparently faced — thanks to this delinquent state agency!

It certainly is becoming more and more obvious why a legislative investigation into the modus operandi of this department is more than in order.

But again, look at how the department has operated in the current school fire hazard correction fiasco.

"Corrective orders" issued by departmental representatives initially required correction of the defect within 30 or 60 or 90 days, etc. — but yet some of the corrective orders were so extensive that plans couldn't even be prepared within the time specified, to say nothing of completion of the actual physical correction itself!

In other words, the same completely unrealistic time schedule was used for requiring removal of fire dangerous rubbish as that for construction of fire-proof stair wells!

These are merely illustrations of the sort of things you have to contend with in fiddling with the Department of Labor and Industry. But again — all of this is only part of the story!

Off The Record

Off The Record

By Bob Clark

Watching Alan B. Shepard on television yesterday afternoon gave this writer a true sense of security. This feeling grew more as the first American to shoot into space answered questions from a group of reporters assembled in Washington, D. C.

Along with his colleagues — six other astronauts — and the men who helped to make the first step in Project Mercury successful, Shepard ran through the three-quarter hour long ordeal with the same poise and calmness which prevailed last Friday at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

Crew-cut, smiling Shepard, a Navy commander by service, met the onslaught of the newsmen and women with the same ease and confidence which has been a trademark of his since coming into the eyes of the general public.

Fellow astronauts, men like John Glenn and Lee Grissom — they were Shepard's backup substitutes in case the now national hero was taken off the firing list — indicated that our nation has some pretty darn good material banking among the services.

Probably the best shot in the air, we needed in these times of stress over world problems was Shepard's 302-mile soar into space. There is no doubt it lifted the nation mentally and physically.

Seeing these seven men together and talking about each other as if they were one was enough to prove that this country is built around the mass not the individual.

Sure, Shepard was the first. But it just as easily could have been Grissom or Glenn or one of the other four. To pinpoint this — when one of the astronauts spoke it was always with the emphasis on "We."

Shepard let it be known that many had a hand in his historic flight. And he wanted the whole world to know that without their help and assistance the American jet into space wouldn't have been possible.

We are thankful for men the calibre of Shepard and for a government that so thoroughly informed — within reason — the movements of Project Mercury.

There is no other spot on the face of this earth where a story unfolded exactly as it was written by a Hollywood penman.

Bless our Fifty Stars and for all they stand — Freedom.

The Allen-Scott Report

Congressman Probed

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington — A veteran Southern congressman is being investigated by a federal grand jury here.

Impaneled on orders of Attorney General Robert Kennedy, the jury is probing charges of kickbacks and bribery in a Defense Department ship repair contract in New York.

The alleged payments amounted to around $25,000.

A number of individuals are involved in this affair. The congressman has been interrogated at least once by the jury, and is slated for further questioning.

Attorney General Kennedy also has reopened the grand jury investigation of the sensational Bernard Goldfine case that rocked the Eisenhower Administration and led to the resignation of Sherman Adams as The Assistant to the President.

Basis of this new probe is information provided by Mildred Paperman, secretary of the Boston textile manufacturer.

The Justice Department has written statements by Miss Paperman enumerating expensive gifts, parties and other gratuities that Goldfine reportedly gave members of Congress and Eisenhower officials.

The grand jury was directed to determine the reliability of these charges, and whether any federal laws were violated.

This resumed inquiry is being made in cooperation with the House investigation committee, headed by Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.), that conducted the original Goldfine-Adams probe. Members of the committee's staff are working closely with Justice Department authorities.

Both grand juries were activated on the strong recommendation of the Criminal Division. After extended study of its findings, the Attorney General approved submitting them to the juries for possible indictments.

Still Disputing — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has two squarely different accounts on whether our Cuban Intelligence is faulty — a key factor in the ill-fated invasion attempt.

Secretary Dean Rusk says it is. Central Intelligence Director Allen Dulles flatly denies that.

In Rusk's closed-door testimony, he told the senators, "The Intelligence we had on Castro's military strength and capabilities was faulty. That information did not bear out what took place."

Dulles firmly refused this, asserting, "Our information on Castro's military capabilities was accurate and sound. The attack was lost on the beachhead."

Explaining that, Dulles said, "The refugee forces were pinned down on the beach and couldn't move after one of Castro's planes, a World War II B-26, sank their main ammunition and supply ship."

This immediately drew sharp fire.

"Didn't you take that possibility into consideration in your planning and preparations?" demanded Senator Homer Capehart (R., Ind.). "It seems inconceivable to me that measures would not be taken to meet the possible loss of a supply ship, particularly with vital ammunition."

"We didn't expect it to happen," replied Dulles. "The refugees had 18 planes to Castro's 6, and we felt they would be able to control the air."

"That's a pretty weak basis to go on," retorted Capehart. "Certainly from your long experience you should know that anything can happen in military operations no matter how much apparent superiority you may think you have. Exactly what did happen in this instance?"

"Castro used his Czech anti-aircraft guns to good advantage," explained Dulles. "He cleared the skies by shooting down the refugee planes that were operating near the beachhead."

More Denials — The Central Intelligence head also emphatically contended that no Russian MIG jet fighters took part in the battle.

"The only planes Castro used against the invasion were B26s that he got when he came into control after Batista," Dulles told the senators. "There were no MIG-17s in this fight. We have carefully checked these reports, and been unable to confirm them. We are convinced they are unfounded."

However, CIA agents have reported that eight MIG-17s are in Cuba in crates. They arrived several months ago from Czechoslovakia on freighters. But there is no evidence as yet these MIGs have been assembled.

Secretary Rusk testified two grave Intelligence errors were made.

"We underestimated Castro's strength," he told the senators, "and we overestimated the strength of the refugee force. We were wrong both ways."

Senator Wayne Morse (D., Ore.) asked about the effect on U.S. prestige.

"A number of Latin American officials have told us they favored the idea of an invasion and wished it had succeeded," Rusk replied. "These are responsible officials and we have no reason to doubt their word."

"Maybe not," retorted Morse, "but if they said that in public they probably would be immediately ousted from office. I hope there won't be another 'sinking of the Maine.'"

Rusk made no reply.

Asked if the Joint Chiefs had approved the invasion, the Secretary of State answered with an emphatic, "They did, indeed. The President has that in writing."

"If that's so," exploded Senator Capehart, "then we are really sunk. How did we ever win World War II?"

"What influenced the decision to support the invasion?"

"We had two choices," explained Rusk. "One was to allow the Kremlin to help Castro set up a police state that would be almost impossible to upset from within. The other was to oust Castro with refugees seeking to free their country. We took that alternative and it failed."

"There is no use miming words about it," added Rusk. "It was a disaster."

Inside You And Yours

Eyes Have It

By Burton H. Fern, M. D.

"A little sand is all right, but my eyes feel like the whole beach and half the ocean!"

Thick matter had sealed Dick's eyelids together. He had conjunctivitis — you'd probably call it pink eye!

Like clear plastic, a fine film of tissue stretches across each eye. Called the "conjunctiva," it covers both the pink and the white.

When irritation inflames the conjunctiva into conjunctivitis, its invisible blood vessels thicken into red streaks. Zig-zagging towards the pupil, these streaks give your eyes that morning — after appearance without any night before. Pink eye is actually bright red!

Extreme Irritation

The eye itches and smart as matter begins to ooze. You can feel 100 cinders scratching nerve endings. Between those hot, heavy lids the sky and ground blur together, while buildings sway back and forth. Bright light hurts like a shiny dagger.

The doctor looks for clues to pinpoint the cause and possibly the germ, if there is one:

Is the pink area red or white? A pale milky color means allergy not infection. Is the pink smooth or bumpy? Is the red color bright or dark? Different germs prefer different shades. Are there little patches where blood vessels have broken?

Is the matter watery like hay fever, stringy and sticks as in allergy or the thick, grayish-yellow of infection? Are there gobs of matter or just the tiny bit found in the virus infection you catch in swimming pools?

Soothing Treatment

Ice packs can cool the pain, while sterilized salt water — 4 teaspoon to the pint — can rinse away thick matter and soothe the eyes. Hydrocortisone eye medicine can melt away any inflammation, but only germ-killing eye drops and ointments can cure the infection.

If pink eye strikes, don't see red — see your doctor. Let him elect the best treatment when the eyes have it!

Just Between Us —

—By Bobby Westbrook

Well, that's better—overnight the violets popped out, the apple blossoms were big enough in bud to start scenting the air, and the wind may have been wet but it was warm—and we were all whooping it up, for once, with our own hero.

School children and government workers in Washington got a day off and many a harried housewife trying to make up for lost time before supper was wishing she had a day off, too. The time was lost in so far as keeping a schedule goes, what with the TV announcing every few minutes "We interrupt to bring you a special news bulletin."

The first one came when I was running dish water—and by the time I got back I'd run all the soapuds out of the pan. On the next break, I put the dishes to soak, and for the next newscast I stood with a handful of silver and the dish towel.

But you can't take all morning to do dishes and still cope with the rest of the day on schedule. So in the late afternoon there was a great deal of scurrying around and deciding to have instant potatoes instead of baked and hamburger instead of meat loaf.

But it's a good thing the astronauts are going back to work today. Maybe we can, too. Although I'll have to admit that it doesn't take a space shot to distract me from housecleaning. I start to wash a window and get so entranced with the new green on the spruce, the brown thrasher skimming the ground that all I need is a clean space big enough to see through to get mesmerized waiting for an apple blossom to burst open.

Step-By-Step Progress To An Exciting Career

By ROBERTA FLEMING ROESCH
"Life to me is an adventure," says Ernestine Haig who, as Secretary of the 1964-65 World's Fair Corporation and Assistant to Mr. Robert Moses, the Fair's President, has one of the most exciting jobs of the Sixties.

"And working has always been an adventure, too," Miss Haig added when I interviewed her at the Fair's administration building in Flushing Meadows.

"I've never been afraid to change from one job to another. I felt it was time to move on to something more exciting. Right now I can think of no job anywhere that could possibly be more exciting than watching a new World's Fair come alive."

Business Experience
How does a woman prepare herself to move into one of the most exciting executive jobs of the decade? In Miss Haig's case, 30 years of business experience totaled up to the job.

During the famous depression Ernestine Haig got her first job as secretary to an investment banker, with typing and shorthand as her initial qualifications. While she worked as a secretary she tried to learn everything possible about the financial business, and she succeeded so well that when her boss left New York to build up a Chicago company he took Miss Haig with him.

Important Post
By the time she left the Chicago company, she was secretary-treasurer of the corporation.

Subsequent jobs included varied posts in the business world, as well as an administrative assistant's job in the office of the Secretary of War during World War II.

Assistant To Judge
Prior to the World's Fair job,

STROUSBURG, PA.

This is your last week for Mother's Day shopping, so be sure to make your selections next time you visit Wyckoff's. If yours is a Mother intent upon being ever-lovely and ever-feminine, right inside our front door you'll find the finest in cosmetics including perfumes; and the most beautiful handbags, scarfs, handkerchiefs, stockings, gloves, and umbrellas. Only a few steps further on you'll see glittering, exciting jewelry priced from 59c up, and the finest lingerie imaginable, to say nothing of all our delicious candies... our books and stationery... and the many unusual items that cram our gift department.

Do you know American women buy 300,000,000 dollars worth of costume jewelry a year, according to Michael Tancer, vice president of Coro, and this doesn't include pillboxes, compacts, and watches! About 25% of all this money goes for pearls. Doesn't THAT suggest a Mother's Day gift to you?

Supper Sat. At Sandhill

Bushkill — A spaghetti supper will be served on May 25 at the Sand Hill Methodist Church by the Women's Society of Christian Service. Serving will start at 5:30 and continue until all have been served.

Kennie Harris will be chef for the supper. Tickets are available from any WSCS member or by calling Lu 8-6769.

"Melange" was mentioned when we discussed the ever-continuing popularity of pearls. They will be worn even more this Fall and Winter than now, Mr. Tancer predicts, because of the increased importance of knits, for which they have special affinity. "What size?" I asked, and Mr. Tancer replied, "Some necklaces will be large... some small... but probably the most popular will be a melange."

One thing is certain—if I continue meeting and talking with enough people, I'll eventually know something... and believe me, I'll never be too old to learn!

Mrs. Julia Holloway, whose delightful book of poems, "From My Heart" is on sale here at Wyckoff's, has written an adorable poem in my honor, telling me she missed me while I was ill and hopes I'll be back on the radio soon. She too has been ill, I hear—fell and broke her nose a month or two ago. Thinking of her, reminds me that her red leather-covered book would make a very lovely gift for Mother on her day... Another inexpensive, pretty, easy-care gift would be a Ship'n Shore blouse from our Sportswear department. They are all so attractive, it would be difficult to choose. And what about a wash-happy Merriweather sweater of acrilan that looks handmade and costs only 3.98 or 5.98. You can choose between the straight bolero type with open front in S, M, or L, or the button front, in size 34 to 40... Mother would be the first to advise you, I think, that WYCKOFF'S is the store with the gifts she most desires.

Six-Week Backlog For Volvo's

A SIX-WEEK order backlog for East Coast delivery of the Swedish-made Volvo PV-544 sports sedan was reported today by Volvo Import, Inc., U.S. Importer.

Noting that this was the first time there has been an announced waiting period for delivery of the Volvo since its introduction here in 1955, John Baylor, local Volvo dealer said:

"Dealer orders and retail sales of Volvos during March and April have been so great that we have exhausted most of our supply of sports sedans in the eastern part of the United States," he said.

Volvo rose from tenth place to sixth among imports marketed here during January, the last month for which official figures are available, Mr. Baylor reported.

In April, East coast Volvo dealers delivered three times as many cars as the similar period last year," he added.

Commenting on the dramatic Volvo sales increase, Mr. Baylor said, "The weather and the general upturn in the U.S. economy, of course, have a good deal to do with it. I also believe that the American car buyer is now looking for a car that he can operate economically, with a minimum of service, over a number of years," he said.

"The Volvo seems to be meeting these requirements," he noted.

QUESTION: I plan to do some painting soon. This time I intend to buy good brushes and take care of them properly, which I haven't done in the past. Should a new brush get a special treatment?

ANSWER: Try to buy a new brush at least a day before you use it. When you get it home, twirl the handle briskly between your hands for several minutes, then rub one hand back and forth across the bristles several additional minutes. Wrap the brush in heavy paper (not paper with paint on it), then suspend it in raw lin-

Hot Water Vital To Health

MAKE sure your hot water system can provide water of at least 140 degrees if your remodeling or home building plans call for installation of an electric dishwasher, advises the National Electrical Manufacturers Association.

An automatic dishwasher's ability to cleanse tableware and pots and pans in water hotter than hands can stand is one of the chief advantages it offers families.

A dishwasher's repeated washings and rinsings in hygienically hot water eliminate bacteria and viruses far more effectively than hand washing can.

The result — cleaner dishes, glassware, utensils, pots, and pans — considerably lessens the chance of spreading colds and other contagious illnesses from one family member to another.

Modern water heating systems can be adjusted readily to provide adequate hot water at a temperature that will permit a dishwasher to do its best job.

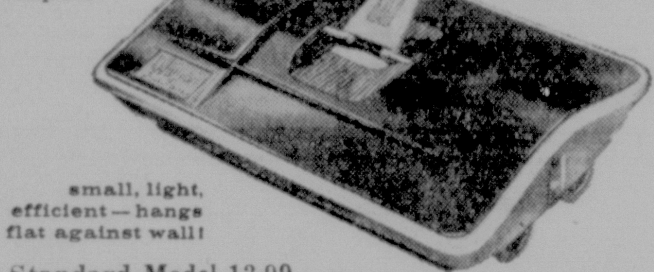

Call in a plumbing or heating contractor to make the adjustment, explaining that you want the water temperature to be at least 140 degrees.

In Other Words

Dear Abby: One of my best friends just left after spending an afternoon over coffee. She told me several "stories" about me which she said she had heard from friends and neighbors. One was that I was getting a divorce. Another was that my husband was running around with a girl who works with him. Also that I am a woman with a terrible past and I don't know what else. How does a person go about proving to people that stories like these are not true? I am sick inside.

SICK INSIDE
Dear Sick: Your "best friend" is a queen - sized trouble-maker. People who peddle "stories" like these to their friends are not above making up the stories. If you are wise, you will forget everything she told you, STOP seeing her. Look for a better "best friend" and listen to none of these tales about yourself or others.

Dear Abby: When my wife goes to the supermarket she puts on a pair of faded old blue jeans, but she wears plenty of eye make-up, green eye shadow, the black liner, and the works! She looks like she's been to an all-night party and hasn't had time to wash her face. I think it looks terrible, but she says it's the style. Is it really?

RIP VAN WINKLE
Dear Rip: A hausfrau should not get herself painted up like a super-duper movie queen to go to the supermarket. But if you want to raise a protest about her appearance, start from the bottom up. Old faded blue jeans are far more offensive than green eye shadow.

Dear Abby: I am a secretary in a small office and I am reasonably certain that my employer is running around on his wife. His wife is a good woman who sits unknowingly at home. Should I go to her with this information? Just what is the right thing to do?

SAD SECRETARY
Dear Sad: Share this "information" with your employer's wife only if you are prepared to back up with proof, testify in her behalf if she wants you to and, of course find another job.

Confidential To Jack: It's only puppy love. You are barking up the wrong tree.

Yes, Abby will answer your letter personally if you write to ABBY, Care of The Daily Record, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Spring housecleaning is much less work in homes with clean flameless electric heat.

Already hundreds of Central Eastern Pennsylvania families are enjoying the clean comfort of truly modern electric home heating at lower cost than most people believe possible.

If this spring's housecleaning was hard work, you owe it to yourself to switch to electric home heating.

In a word, it's clean.

Typical of the enthusiasm of your friends and neighbors who are already living in electrically heated homes are these comments: "It's much cleaner . . . there's no film of dirt as with our old-fashioned system."

"No furnace dirt or dust at all."

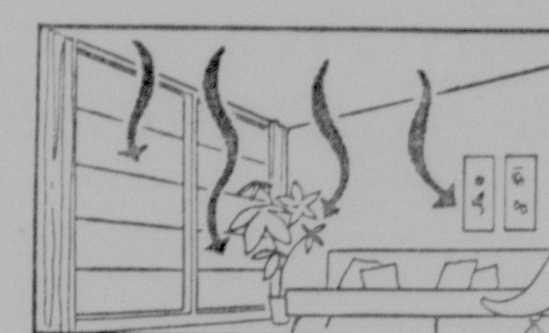

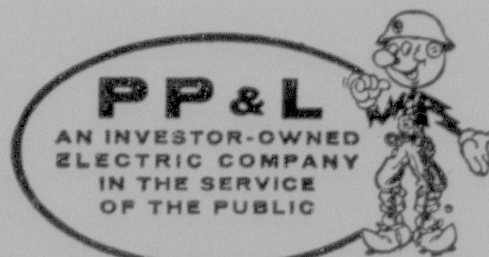

"With the furnace eliminated, much of the cause of household dirt is eliminated."

In addition, homemakers like the fact that there's no furnace to waste space; they like the individual room controls that let you choose a different temperature for each room; they like the economy of having virtually no maintenance costs.

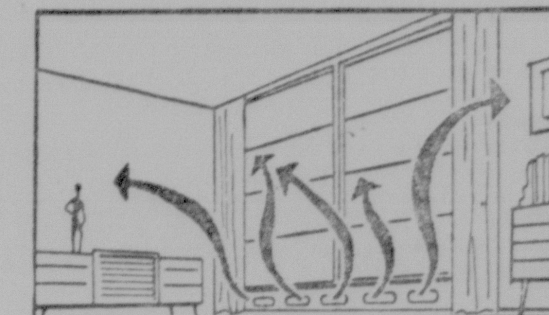

Clean, even electric house heating is well worth looking into. In addition to the comfort it has the practical advantage of enhancing the value of your home.

To the right is brief, factual information on the three types most popular in this area. If you're planning to build, buy or modernize see your electric home heating contractor now.

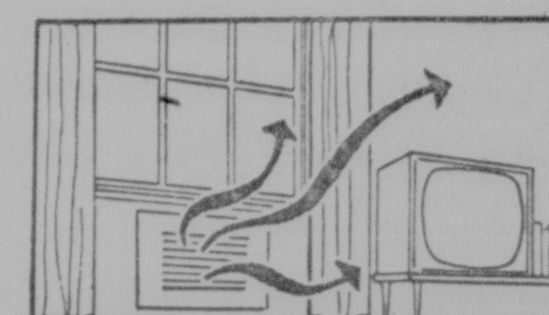

Flameless electric home heating is so clean . . .
YOU LIVE BETTER ELECTRICALLY

Ceiling cable heat is invisible. Wires less than 1/4" thick are fastened to ceilings before plastering. Each room can have a thermostat.

Baseboard units heat by both radiation and convection. All surfaces are warmed evenly, and control is by individual room thermostat.

Wall panel heaters have heating coils behind a decorative grill. Some of these thermostatically controlled units also have small circulating fans.

Tottenham Hails Soccer Champs

LONDON (AP) — An estimated 70,000 people lined the streets of Tottenham suburb Sunday to hail Tottenham Hotspur, the soccer team that has made 20th century history by winning the English League and English Cup in the same season.

The crowds cheered as the team rode on top of an open doubledeck bus. It was the kind of demonstration which the re-ticent British usually reserve for royalty.

Tottenham completed the double by defeating Leicester City 2-0 in the cup final at Wembley Stadium Saturday. The last team to do the double was Aston Villa in 1897.

Second Bonnie Star Has TB

OLEAN, N. Y. (AP) — A doctor confirmed Monday that a second member of the St. Bonaventure basketball team, sophomore Freddy Crawford, has tuberculosis.

Crawford's physician said that the 20-year-old forward has the disease in both lungs.

Crawford, from New York City, was a roommate of All-America Tom Stith, who was stricken with the disease in one lung. Stith was transferred to Mt. Morris Sanatorium near Rochester last Friday after final tests last week confirmed that he had TB.

Liston Extends Invite To Floyd

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The following invitation was received Monday from Charles (Sonny) Liston, No. 1 contender for Floyd Patterson's heavyweight boxing title.

"Mr. Charles Sonny Liston is pleased to invite you to a luncheon at which he will announce and introduce his new manager on Wednesday, May 10, 12:30 p.m."

Liston recently bought his contract for $75,000 from his old manager, Pep Barone of Allentown, Pa. The move was an effort by Liston to "clean house" so that Patterson will give him a title fight. Patterson has said repeatedly he will not fight Liston as long as certain elements allegedly are behind the challenger.

CLIFTON, N. J. (AP) — George P. Synnot, 58, for many years a scout for the Los Angeles Dodgers baseball team, died Monday in his home after a brief illness.

Deal Away Duren, Thomas, James, One Other Player

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The Los Angeles Angels Monday announced a four-for-two player swap with the New York Yankees —outfielder Bob Cerv and pitcher Tex Clevenger of the Angels for pitcher Ryne Duren, pitcher Johnny James, outfielder Leroy Thomas and an unnamed outfielder of the Yanks.

The Angels, new entry in the American League long dominated by the New Yorkers, called it "our biggest and most important deal."

A spokesman said the Angel brass feels Duren will help the club more than Clevenger, formerly with the Washington Senators and Boston Red Sox.

The deal, the Angels' sixth, is effective immediately.

General Manager Fred Haney of the Angels and his Yankee counterpart, Roy Haney, concluded the negotiations here.

The Angel spokesman added that while they wanted Duren, "Clevenger was probably the key to the Yankees."

Duren, 31, is one of the fastest pitchers in the majors but has been troubled through his career by wildness. Duren had an 0-1 record with the Yanks this season.

Clevenger, 28, pitched in 12 of

St. Bonnie Coach Signs With Knicks

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—Eddie Donovan, the 38-year-old coach who led St. Bonaventure to the No. 3 position in college basketball last season, was named coach of the professional New York Knickerbockers Monday. He was given a two-year contract at an undisclosed salary.

Ned Irish, president of Madison Square Garden which operates the Knicks, said at a news conference that Donovan would succeed Carl Braun, who coached the club for the last season and a half.

"We had to make a change," said Irish. "You couldn't start next year with a 21-58 record. Braun has been given his complete release. He is free to negotiate with any other club."

Donovan, present at the conference, said his contract at St. Bonaventure expired this year. He had coached the varsity at the Olean, N. Y., university for eight years during which time his teams won 139 and lost 57 games.

"I am tickled to death to have him," said Irish. "I never thought I could get him away from his paradise up in Olean. I don't think there is a better coach in the United States. Lack of experience in the league (National Basketball Association) won't handicap him unduly. He has seen many of our games on TV and has been studying three or four of our game films."

The Knicks finished in the cellar last year under Braun, a former Knick player.

Minisink Hills Man Wins Boat Trophy In Maryland

RICHARD Kane, Minisink Hills' speediest boat pilot, captured a big one Sunday at Essex, Md., after winning the five-mile competition in the fastest time of the day.

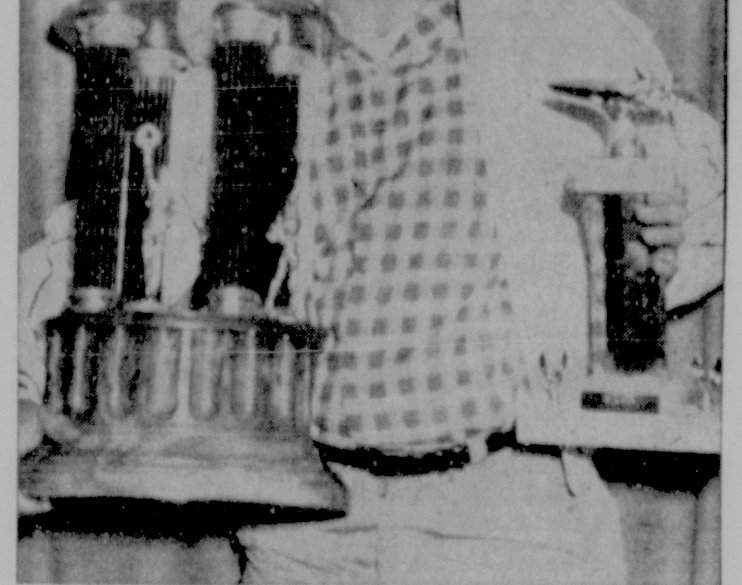

Kane covered the course in 3:43 while averaging about 60 miles per hour with his 40 horsepower boat. He outdistanced 100 others in the competition.

The races were sanctioned by the American Power Boat Association.

Ned Barry of Sunbury, was runnerup in the D-Hydro event and Joe Kane, brother to Richard, took third place in the Class C Utility race.

Gets Trophy
Since the course was not measured, the time is listed as an unofficial record.

In posting the record time, Kane won the rights to the Savina Lucarelli Award, a trophy which is given to the boat pilot who records the fastest time on the course. The huge trophy can be retired only by winning three consecutive years and is symbolic of Region Four's biggest race.

Kane, who is registered in Region Three covering the eastern states, won the event's trophy after taking first place in the "D Utility Runabout."

Donald Christy of Baltimore, took the Lucarelli title in 1959 and again last year, but Kane halted his string and now can become sole owner if successful the next two years.

During his 3 years of racing competition, Kane has accumulated 40 trophies from all parts of the country. He hopes to continue the winner's ways in the nationals at Alabama in August as well as at Connecticut this weekend. The Minisink Hills pilot also competes at Delaware Water Gap and Pardee Place races.

Tigers Get Real Test In Next 20 Days
DETROIT (AP) — Twenty-two games in the next 20 days will give the high-flying Detroit Tigers an opportunity to prove they belong in first place, and Manager Bob Scheffing says he is not worried about his young club.

Of the 22 games, 18 will be played on the road. The Tigers, leading the American League by 2 1/2 games, will visit six cities on their longest road trip of the season.

"The boys are playing the same brand of baseball on the road as they are at home," said Scheffing as the Tigers enjoyed a day off after winning six out of seven on a week's road trip. "They're playing consistently sound baseball in every respect."

The manager still is avoiding any predictions about his club, but he does say he thinks the Tigers can avoid the collapse that has ruined other fine starts by the Detroit club.

"We have enough guys playing well to avoid a long slump, I think," he said. "If one or two guys were carrying us, then we might be in for quite a tumble. But everyone is playing well."

The results: Slippery Rock 314; Clarion 316; Kutztown 319; West Chester 319; ESSC 321; Indiana 321; Edinboro 330; Shipensburg 331; Bloomsburg 332; Mansfield 336; California 338; Lock Haven 3667; Cheyney 375.

East Stroudsburg State College finished for a tie in fifth place with Indiana State College with a total of 321 strokes.

Thirteen teams were entered in competition which was held on the 5,100 yard Caledonia Course under clear skies.

Bob Byler of Slippery Rock won the low medalist honors after beating Tom Yacobozzi of Edinboro in a sudden death playoff after having tied for an 18 hole total of 72.

The medal scores for the ESSC team were Roger Stern 74, Gerhard Gartner 78, George Bishop 83 and Wayne Howell 86.

Dr. George Ockershausen of the ESSC faculty won the coaches trophy with a score of 79. This closes out the season for the ESSC team which was unbeaten in four matches.

East Stroudsburg Lumber Co. 3 Generations of Business In The Poconos!

East Stroudsburg Lumber Co. is one of the oldest establishments in the Pocono Mountains. The corporation was founded in 1887 as a co-partnership between the Hon. T. Y. Hoffman, Republican Associate Judge and Charles Rhodes of East Stroudsburg. General Manager today is Ted Hoffman, popularly known throughout the county for his work in various civic organizations and additionally for his interest in youth in the sport of Junior bowling. Many stories are recalled by Ted on his several trips to Canada for hunting and fishing. Ted has been with East Stroudsburg Lumber all his life. Previously his father and grandfather held the same position. Since its founding, expansion has occurred yearly. And with it came the reputation of a local business organization that stands for trust. There are many good policies carried out by East Stroudsburg Lumber that are known by local contractors and builders. Most outstanding are fair prices and a willingness to sell products in building that can be relied upon. There are many instances when people locally have purchased building material outside the county because they felt they could get it cheaper. What many don't realize is that often delays in waiting added up to more money than the products would have cost here. And in some cases the material was defective and unreturnable. None of these problems exist when a builder or a "do-it-yourselfer" does business with East Stroudsburg Lumber Co. Presently the owners are G. D. Hoffman and O. P. Hoffman. But, most probably you'll meet Ted when you need some material. Drop in at your convenience. Deal with a dealer you know. You'll get friendly advice on any building ideas. And if you compare costs you'll find you'll save greatly at East Stroudsburg Lumber Co.

Non-Stockholding Directors

By William A. Doyle

Q. I own stock in a certain company. It's quite a bundle of stock for a person of my means. Two of the directors of this company don't own a single share of stock in the company. Both of these men are wealthy and are partners of big brokerage firms. What are your views on such a situation?

A. This is a touchy subject. It has been batted back and forth for a long, long time—especially at this time of year, when many companies hold their annual directors' meetings. Directors, of course, are elected by stockholders. The board of directors is supposed to represent all stockholders—the owners of the company.

And there is strong feeling in many quarters that all directors should be stockholders. However, many companies do have directors who are not stockholders. These non-stockholding directors often are very helpful to a company, because of their business connections, experience, etc.

And, in the case of directors who are well-known in the financial community, they often represent big stockholders. That may be the case in the situation you are so charged up about. With a really successful investment in a very good company, you have no real cause for complaint.

Nevertheless, if you're interested in one man's opinion, here it is: It's not too much to expect that all directors should own at least a small amount of the company's stock.

Q. I have never had an account with a brokerage firm. I have always purchased stock through my bank, on the advice of the bank's trust department. I own small amounts of American Telephone & Telegraph, Anaconda, Cities Service, Consolidated Edison, Foremost Dairies, General Electric, General Motors, Long Island Lighting, National Dairies, Southern Pacific, Tri-Continental, U. S. Steel and Manufacturers Trust Co.

I have a fairly high income and can afford to invest about $400 a month from now on. Should I open a brokerage account?

A. What in the world for? You own a nicely diversified list of high-quality stocks. You have an investment portfolio to be proud of. You don't say what prices you paid or when you made your purchases. But it's a cinch that the overall market value of your securities is well above your cost.

You're doing great. Why rock the boat? Just follow the bank's advice. Many people buy stocks through banks—without ever seeing brokers.

Q. Can you list the names of those organizations planning to establish real estate mutual funds?

A. That would be impossible. The real estate investment trusts aren't really off the ground as yet. Many different organizations are working on such plans. I couldn't even begin to compile a list.

But don't worry. Once they get going, you'll hear about them. They figure to be aggressive advertisers. (Mr. Doyle will answer only representative letters of general interest in his column. He cannot answer phone queries.)

Royal Treat for Your Furs

UP-TO-DATE POLIO SHOTS

Polio struck last summer—it struck the summer before. There is no reason to think it won't strike again. The main targets seem to be babies and breadwinners (the very young and their parents). The way to protection is the complete series of polio shots.

For information call your physician or local health department. And don't delay in doing this. It is vital. It is the one thing you cannot and must not put off!

Don't take a chance—take your polio shots

The climate couldn't be better for buying a new JET-SMOOTH CHEVROLET

(and that's the car more people are buying!)

The wish-I-had-a-Chevy season's here! Summer's in sight. Horizons are brightening. Vacation plans are percolating. It's the most rewarding time of the year to stop by and talk buy with your Chevrolet dealer. And why not do more than just talk? Take a Jet-smooth Chevy out on the road. That wonderfully gentle ride you'll feel is what we're so proud of (Full Coil suspension and a chassisful of other road tamers are responsible). Inspect all the advantages of the finely built Body by Fisher (none can match it in Chevrolet's field). Look over the full model selection and compare prices (18 Six and V8 Jet-smooth Chevis are priced below comparable competitive models*). So now you know why more people are buying Chevis than any other make. Just one other thing—check the sweet trade-in allowance your Chevrolet dealer can offer you now. See how easy it is to blossom out in a new Chevrolet!

*Based on a comparison of manufacturers' suggested retail prices (including Federal tax) for models with 118-inch wheelbase or above.
